OSLER LECTURE

6pm, Monday, 24th February 2020

Apothecaries Hall, Black Friar’s Lane, London EC4V 6EJ

Will Parker is Clinical Research Fellow in Cardiology at the University of Sheffield and Honorary Registrar in Cardiology at Sheffield Teaching Hospitals NHS Foundation Trust. He trained in Medicine and Pharmacology at the University of Cambridge before returning to his home city of Sheffield to work and study. He is currently in the final year of work towards a PhD in cardiovascular pharmacology.

Judson Chesterman (1903-1987) is not a name familiar to many when it comes to the early development of cardiac surgery. Yet, working at the City General Hospital, Sheffield, he developed the first mitral valve replacement in the world and, having toured North America to see many of the greats operate, was a pioneer in the use of cardiopulmonary bypass. This lecture will tell the story not only of his life and career, but also of the journey that led to the rediscovery of important previously unreported primary sources.

Library open from 5pm. Refreshments from 5:30pm.
