

FACULTY OF THE HISTORY & PHILOSOPHY OF MEDICINE & PHARMACY

Crowdfunding, ethics, and medical responsibility

Dr Kathryn Millard BSc MBBS FFPH DHMSA

Sydney Selwyn Winner 2022

The growth of crowdfunding for medical treatment has highlighted a number of ethical issues. These include concerns about fundraising for unproven treatments, risks to privacy, the governance of crowdfunding campaigns, and inequalities in the success of crowdfunding. After exploring these broad issues, I will look at the responsibilities of different stakeholders involved in crowdfunding. Finally, I will look at the ethical challenges this may present for doctors and other healthcare providers in the UK, who may be directly or indirectly involved with patients seeking crowdfunding, and consider whether specific guidance is needed.

Clinician-managers: the boundary of medical ethics?

Dr Koot Kotze MBChB DipHIVMan

Sydney Selwyn High Commendation

Clinicians who reach seniority in their clinical careers may transition part- or full-time into management positions in the healthcare system. When these clinician-managers are faced with ethical dilemmas, which ethical frameworks should inform their decisions? Do they simply practice medicine at scale? Is there a body of management ethics which might guide them instead? Or can one make the case for a clinical-managerial ethics which is distinct? With a focus on medical doctors in management, this lecture will explore these questions.
